Each title deals with a family crisis which may severely disrupt a child's life. Carefully written, they deal with each situation in a sensible and down-to-earth way. Three of the stories (good reads in their own right) give running commentaries that provide a solid Christian background upon which to base talk when reading aloud. The fourth, Emma Says Goodbye, brings Christian ethics about death and life after death into the story in a more direct way. Emotional support is given all the way through and the stories make great efforts to provide the questions that children may feel too insecure or upset to ask at the time.
