First in a quartet, this fast-moving fantasy concerns the usual good and evil motif, here fighting for power over the dragon-like wyverns that are cast in stone on the gates of Herpeton Manor. The vicar is dodgy, his woman friend who keeps snakes is sinister and Mr Parcel, who carries out experiments on dogs, is malevolent. The connection of young Thomas Ketch to an old-time village wise man and consequently his power to save the village forms the dramatic climax. Throughout, the question lurks in the background - to what lengths should we be prepared to go to bring about relief from human suffering?
