Humans can really complicate life for a cat. In his diary, Tuffy relates just what it's like to bear the brunt of everyone's mood - being misunderstood, under-appreciated and having to suffer human stupidity in hurrying to the wrong conclusions. Of course, there was uproar when Tuffy brought in next door's much loved rabbit, a bit bedraggled (and dead), but then no-one gets dragged the whole way across a garden and through a freshly oiled cat flap and ends up looking as if they're just off to a party'. This had me laughing aloud. It's an hilarious and easy read, best appreciated by over-9s.
